

LGBTQ Fund

Theory of Change

What We Fund

GNOF's LGBTQ Fund supports organizations that increase the quality of life and access to opportunity for LGBTQ individuals and families, particularly the most marginalized members of the community, including elders, transgender youth and adults of color, low-income LGBTQ people, and LGBTQ persons who are disabled. Priority is given to work that aims to:

1. Advocate for effective policies that will improve the quality of life for LGBTQ individuals and families.
2. Build the cultural competency of "mainstream" organizations that serve LGBTQ clientele, particularly elders, transgender youth and adults of color, low-income LGBTQ people, and LGBTQ persons who are disabled. This work would provide the staff of "mainstream" organizations with the education, tools, and professional development opportunities that will help improve their knowledge, skills, and attitudes when serving LGBTQ clientele.
3. Provide LGBTQ individuals and families with high quality, well-coordinated, and culturally competent direct services related to: primary care, behavioral, and preventive healthcare; crisis management and legal support; workforce development; financial literacy and asset building; transportation; housing and safe spaces to congregate, and non-HIV status-related social services.

Why We Use This Approach

The selection of these funding areas was informed primarily by input from members of the LGBTQ community, and by input from those who provide services to and advocate on behalf of members of the LGBTQ community. We believe these individuals can most effectively identify community needs and potential ways to address them.

Part of what we heard from community members is that elders, transgender youth and adults of color, low-income LGBTQ people, and LGBTQ persons who are disabled face the greatest challenges.

As for the specific priority areas:

1. Advocacy: We understand that while direct services for members of the LGBTQ community are critically important and much needed, the community is very strongly affected by policies that fail to protect individuals and families from discrimination in employment, housing, and other areas, and that hurt the community in other ways.
2. Cultural competency: We heard that so-called "mainstream" service organizations can do a better job of understanding and responding to the special circumstances and challenges faced by members of the LGBTQ community. Mainstream service providers also acknowledge they can improve services by applying an "LGBTQ lens" to their work.
3. Gaps in services: Our informants identified the following service areas as being the highest priority: Primary, behavioral, and preventive healthcare; crisis management and legal support; workforce development; financial literacy and asset building; transportation; housing and safe spaces to congregate; and services (not relating to HIV status).

What We Don't Fund

Unfortunately, we are not able to support organizations that do not prioritize increasing the quality of life and access to opportunity for elders, transgender youth and adults of color, low-income LGBTQ people, and LGBTQ persons who are disabled. We are grateful to the many organizations and foundations that support important LGBTQ interests, such as marriage equality. While we realize funding from the LGBTQ Fund is not enough to support the entire spectrum of LGBTQ issues, GNOF believes that supporting organizations that prioritize increasing the quality of life and access to opportunity for elders, transgender youth and adults of color, low-income LGBTQ people, and LGBTQ persons who are disabled is the most strategic way to support our LGBTQ community with limited dollars.

Additionally, we believe that supporting organizations that advocate for effective policies to increase the quality of life and access to opportunity for elders, transgender youth and adults of color, low-income LGBTQ people, and LGBTQ persons who are disabled will have the largest impact throughout the LGBTQ community, communities of color, and low-income communities.
